Foreword

This is the 2nd edition of the University of Lincoln’s guide to Harvard Referencing, which is the main referencing standard in use in the University (guides for other styles are also available from the Library).

Referencing is a key academic skill, and an important way to avoid accusations of plagiarism, so this Handbook will play a key role in supporting you throughout your study.

Should you need it, further support is available from your Academic Subject Librarian – just see the Library website for contact details.

Ian Snowley
University Librarian

Authors’ notes

Following feedback from students and academic staff, the 2nd edition now features:

- extended guidance on how to reference
- all new examples
- additional annotated diagrams
- an index to help you locate sources

The main sources that you will use are likely to be books, journals and websites and although we have included a large selection of information sources, it is impossible to cover everything that you may use in your academic work. We recommend therefore, that you use our examples as a basis for referencing other types of information not included in this handbook.

Your School may use another referencing style and the Library has produced the following guides APA, IEEE, MHRA and OSCOLA, which are available at http://library.lincoln.ac.uk/learning-teaching/referencing/

You should check with your School which referencing style to follow and your Academic Subject Librarian can also advise you.

The University of Lincoln Library subscribes to referencing management software, which can help you gather and organise your references; for more information go to http://library.lincoln.ac.uk There are also a number of services offering this free of charge, e.g. Microsoft Word, Mendeley and Zotero.

Referencing

You need to reference to:

- demonstrate that you have undertaken research for your academic work
- avoid accusations of plagiarism
- acknowledge the work of other authors

Each information source in this handbook has an example of an in-text citation, a reference list entry as well as a checklist outlining what to include in your reference.

The most efficient way to reference your academic work is to keep a record of the necessary information at the point of using it.

Harvard style

There are two parts to Harvard referencing:

1. In-text citation
2. Reference list

1. In-text citation

An in-text citation does not give full publication details, such as the title or publisher: this information should be in your reference list. Your in-text citation should go after a quotation, paraphrase or summary and should include the author’s surname, the year of publication and a page number (see page 3 for examples). If you use the author’s name in the sentence you don’t need to repeat it in the in-text citation.

- All your in-text citations should have a corresponding entry in your reference list. If, for example, you cite from page 83 of a book by Goldacre (Goldacre, 2009, 83) and then cite from page 7 of the same book (Goldacre, 2009, 7), you only put one reference to the author in your reference list and do not include any page numbers, e.g.

- For sources with three or more authors, give the surname of the first author, followed by et al. (Latin for and others)

- Acronyms such as the CPS (Crown Prosecution Service) or NHS (National Health Service) can be given either in full or as the acronym, but you need to be consistent and make sure your in-text citation matches your reference list entry

- Some Schools may not require page numbers in the in-text citations. If you are unsure, please contact your tutor.
Examples of in-text citations

Social media is deeply intertwined and analogous with open education and is “authored, critiqued and reconfigured by a mass of users” (Selwyn, 2014, 106).

A short quotation in double quotation marks, followed by an in-text citation for an information source with one author.

The open education movement grew out of the open source movement in software development (Deimann and Farrow, 2013, 345).

If the source has two authors, name them both in your in-text citation. This is also an example of summarising.

Online resources offer opportunities for people living with disabilities but also create challenges (McAndrew et al., 2012, 345; Seale et al., 2015, 127).

You can combine in-text citations by separating them with a semi-colon. If there are three or more authors, give the surname of the first author followed by et al.

Baggaley writes quite sceptically about MOOCs, describing the inconclusive results of some evaluations (2013, 373).

If you include the author’s surname within your text, only give the year (and page number if necessary) in brackets.

2. Reference list

Your reference list gives the full details of the information sources (such as books, journal articles and websites) that you have cited in your text. Put your reference list at the end of your academic work. It should be in alphabetical order by the surname of the first author/editor or corporate author.

Author/editor

- If there is no author, use the title of publication instead
- List the authors in the order they are given in the source of information
• The standard format for an author’s name is their surname, a comma, followed by their initials with a full stop after each initial e.g.
  Joanne Kathleen Rowling should be listed as Rowling, J.K.
• Do not use the format above for corporate authors, e.g.
  Tate Modern should be listed as Tate Modern
• If the source has two authors put ‘and’ between their names. If there are three or more authors the last name should be preceded by ‘and’ e.g.
  Atrill, P. and McLaney, E.
  Toomey, R., Panisson, M.S., Kremen, W.S., Franz, C.E. and Lyons, M.J.
• Double-barrelled surnames should be listed under the first part of the name, e.g.
  Baeza-Yates should be listed under B
• Surnames with prefixes should be listed under the prefix, retaining any lower case letters e.g.
  Guy de Maupassant should be listed as de Maupassant, G.
• Titles such as Dr, Prof, Sir do not need to be given unless the source gives a title instead of a first name e.g.
  Lord Justice Leveson
• Postnominals such as MD, RN, PhD, CBE do not need to be given
• The names of editors should be followed by (ed.) for a single editor or (eds.) where there is more than one
• Disregard the apostrophe within surnames such as O’Sullivan when putting them in alphabetical order in your reference list, e.g.
  Ortega
  O’Sullivan
  Otterly
• If you use more than one source by the same author, list them in date order starting with the earliest
• If you have referred to works by the same author but with different co-authors, list their individual work first followed by their jointly authored work in alphabetical order of the next author, e.g.
• If you refer to an organisation that has changed its name e.g. NICE, which was formerly known as National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence and is now known as National Institute for Health and Care Excellence - you should use the name that it was known as at the time of publication
• Company/organisation names which start with words such as A, An or The, e.g. The Big Give and The White Company should be listed under the first major word e.g.
  Big Give, The White Company, The Year

- If the information source has no date, put undated in round brackets, e.g.
  Clinch, M. (undated)...

- If you use more than one source by the same author, from the same year, you will need to differentiate between them, e.g.

  In-text citation
  (Ogunyemi, 2012a)
  (Ogunyemi, 2012b)

Reference list

Ogunyemi, O. (2012a) Sourcing and representation routines in the black African press in the United Kingdom. In: I. Rigoni and E. Saitta (eds.) *Mediating cultural diversity in a globalised

Ogunyemi, O. (2012b) What newspapers, films, and television do Africans living in Britain see and read?: the media of the African diaspora. Lampeter: Edwin Mellen Press.

Title

- Titles for books, journals and websites should be in italics
- Titles should be in sentence case, with main titles being separated from subtitles with a colon e.g. Forensic science: current issues, future directions. There are two exceptions to this:
  1. academic convention is that all major words in journal titles have an initial capital, e.g.
     Social Work Education: an International Journal
  2. proper nouns should keep their capital letter, e.g. The California gold rush

Edition

- You can use either the number or the word for the edition number e.g. 8th edition or eighth edition. However, you need to be consistent throughout your reference list

Place of publication and publisher

- If multiple locations are given for the place of publication, only use the first listed
- If an information source is not published in the UK, you should also give the country, e.g.
  Boston, USA
- If a book gives the name of the imprint (a department within a larger publishing company) along with the main publishing house, give the imprint name in your reference
- Do not include company designations such as Limited, Ltd, PLC, corp, inc.
Date of access
This is the date that you looked at an online source and can be given as 6 July 2015 or 6th July 2015 or 6/7/15. Whichever style you chose, be consistent throughout your reference list.

PDFs
A Portable Document Format (PDF) is a file format which is usually referenced as a website unless there is a more appropriate source type.

Works not in English
You may need to check with your tutor before using works not in English. However, if you do translate works yourself, provide in-text citations and reference list entries in the usual way but also give the name of the language in round brackets after the reference list entry, e.g.

Reference list

Bibliography
Your School may ask you to provide a bibliography as well as a reference list. A bibliography can be defined as either a list of:

- additional sources of information not referred to in your reference list
- all the sources of information that you have consulted, including the items in your reference list

A bibliography should be formatted in exactly the same way as your reference list. Please check with your tutor whether you need to include a bibliography after your reference list and which type is expected.

Plagiarism
Plagiarism is the use of another author’s idea and words, either intentionally or unintentionally, without acknowledging the source of the information. It is an academic offence and will be treated seriously by the University (see University General Regulations).

You can avoid plagiarism by referencing correctly. For more advice about how to avoid plagiarism go to the Library’s tutorial http://library.lincoln.ac.uk/learning-teaching/referencing/

Turnitin is software that detects plagiarism and can be used by your tutors to ensure academic integrity. See http://submit.ac.uk/ for more details.
Quoting, paraphrasing and summarising

Quoting

Quoting is copying a short section of text, word for word, directly from an information source into your work. You indicate a quotation by using double quotation marks at the beginning and end of the text, e.g. “the search for unattainable perfection could mean missing deadlines” (Williams and Reid, 2011, 94). The quotation is then followed by the in-text citation.

Longer quotations (usually longer than two lines) should start on a new line, be indented, have quotation marks at the beginning and end of the text and should be followed immediately with an in-text citation, e.g.

“The important point to remember is that in your review you should present a logical argument that leads smoothly into your own research, justifying both the need for work and the methodology that is going to be used.” (Ridley, 2012, 100)

Ellipses (…) can be used to show that some part of the quotation has been left out e.g.

“The important point to remember is that in your review you should present a logical argument…justifying both the need for work and the methodology that is going to be used.” (Ridley, 2012, 100)

Paraphrasing

When you put a short section of text from an information source into your own words, you are paraphrasing. Although the words are your own, you are still using ideas from the original text so you must give an in-text citation, including a page number to acknowledge the source.

Summarising

When you concisely describe in your own words the main ideas of an information source, you are providing a broad overview of that source. This is known as summarising and you must give an in-text citation, including a page number or page range to acknowledge the source.

Secondary referencing (citing a source within another source)

Education providers should exploit the versatility of technology to create accessibility via multiple means of representation, expression and engagement (The Universal Design for Learning, 2012, cited in McAndrew et al., 2012, 345).

Above is an example of how to cite a work (The Universal Design for Learning) that you have not read directly but have read about in another source (McAndrew et al.). This is known as secondary referencing and you should try to avoid it where possible by reading the original work. If you are unable to locate the original, your in-text citation should state the details of the source that you have not been able to get hold of, along with the correct details of the work that you have read. You should only list the source that you have read in your Reference List, e.g. McAndrew et al.

Green, White and Command Papers

When considering introducing a new law, the UK Government will produce a discussion document called a Green Paper. White papers set out the details of the Government’s future policy on a particular topic and will often be the basis for a Bill before Parliament. Command Papers are the collective name given to different types of papers prepared by the Government and presented to Parliament with the words “presented to Parliament by command of His/Her Majesty”.
